What can happen to our muscles over time

- Our bodies & posture are held in balance by the muscular system. To stand still there are various muscles throughout the body constantly tightening & slackening to maintain the stillness that you desire.
- If one or more of your muscles becomes too tight or slack then your posture will be misaligned & your body will deliberately put other muscles out of their normal state of tone to compensate. If this is not corrected it will, over a period of time, you will have a permanent imbalance.
- You will become accustomed to this over time & quite probably will not notice that you have a dysfunction until you try to do something which requires a normal full range of movement or strain, & that is when you become injured.

What can happen to our muscles over time

- This is where massage therapy comes into play for if the muscles being worked are too tight they will be relaxed and stretch, if they are too slack then they will be toned and tightened.
- If a joint is too tight causing stiffness then it will be released, or if too slack then it will be tightened, or rather the surrounding tissue that holds it in its proper alignment will be adjusted.
- This is the main physical property to massage and it does have a pronounced effect on all the systems of your body, as well as relaxing you mentally and reducing emotional stress.
